Global Collaboration Advances Patient Care and the Treatment of Atopic Dermatitis

The International Eczema Council (IEC) unites dermatologists, allergists, and PhDs from around the globe. Together, these experts improve the treatment of atopic dermatitis by promoting research, education, and best practices internationally.

Through the IEC, more than 150 dedicated clinicians and researchers in 33 countries collaborate to advance research and translate breakthroughs. We're proud of the significant achievements our Council has made since the IEC was founded in late 2014, including:

Nearly 50 live symposia presented at major scientific congresses and meetings worldwide

More than 20 articles published in major medical journals to share the results of collaborative research

9 early-career physicians paired with Councilor mentors through our growing Fellowship program

129 videos featuring 70+ hours of content as on-demand, free education on atopic dermatitis

Working together across borders and roles, our physicians are transforming the lives of people with atopic dermatitis. We invite you to learn from our experts—and consider joining us to advance our shared mission. Find out more at EczemaCouncil.org/become-a-councilor-or-associate.
